Sportswriter Rediscovers Football Family and a Bit of Faith at Minnesota St. John's

As a sportswriter, I have the privilege of covering a wide range of sporting events, from high school games to professional championships. While I enjoy all aspects of my job, there is something special about covering small-town football. There is a sense of community and family that is unlike anything else in sports.

This past fall, I had the opportunity to cover the Minnesota St. John's football team. St. John's is a small, private school located in Collegeville, Minnesota. The football team has a long and storied history, dating back to the late 1800s. Despite their success on the field, the St. John's football program has always been more than just about winning games. It is a program that is built on faith, family, and community.

The Football Family

The first thing that struck me about the St. John's football team was the sense of family. The players, coaches, and staff all seemed to have a genuine love and respect for one another. This was evident in the way they interacted with each other on and off the field.

One of the most touching examples of this family atmosphere came after a tough loss. The team had just been eliminated from the playoffs, and the players were understandably disappointed. However, instead of dwelling on their defeat, they came together as a team and prayed for their opponents. This act of compassion and sportsmanship spoke volumes about the character of this team.

The Role of Faith

Faith is an important part of the St. John's football program. The team has a chaplain who travels with them to every game. The chaplain provides spiritual guidance and support to the players, and he also leads them in prayer before each game.

The players on the St. John's football team come from a variety of religious backgrounds. However, they all share a common belief in the power of faith. This faith gives them strength and courage, both on and off the field.

The Community

The St. John's football team is a source of pride for the Collegeville community. The team's games are well-attended, and the fans are passionate and supportive. This support from the community gives the players a sense of purpose and belonging.

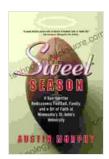

The team also gives back to the community in a variety of ways. The players volunteer their time at local schools and churches, and they also participate in community events. This involvement in the community helps to build relationships between the team and the people they serve.

My Personal Journey

Covering the St. John's football team was a transformative experience for me. I was reminded of the importance of faith, family, and community. I also learned that sports can be more than just a game. Sports can be a vehicle for positive change, both on and off the field.

I am grateful for the opportunity to have covered the St. John's football team. I am a better person for having had this experience.

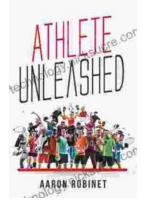

The Minnesota St. John's football team is a special group of young men. They are talented athletes, but they are also good people. They represent their school, their community, and their faith with pride. I am honored to have had the opportunity to tell their story.
